

*“Students should work for two years before going to university.” –
Essay*

From my point of view the statement “Students should work for two years before going to university.” has good and bad sides so it is difficult to say which side is better. In my opinion to this statement the main goal is to finish university with graduation as I will explain next.

Personally, I think students that have started working right after high school would not want to return back to study. Because when you have started making money on your own you will not have motivation to stop with it.

Furthermore, some students should have problems with memorizing things that they were studying in high school. In addition, someone after working for two years might have problems with writing tests, assignments again and studying itself. On the other hand, when you have not got enough money for paying tuition fee and your future school does not want to give you a scholarship it is a good way to pay for it.

All things considered, when you have money for tuition fee or you get a scholarship it is not a good idea to work two years before going to university. But when you have not got money, you need to work for it.
