

We depend too much on computers today

(essay)

The majority of people in this world have certainly used their computers to do basic things in which using computers is necessary, but nowadays we do more things through the computers than we do in real life. However, they are used also in activities that we are able to do by ourselves.

First of all, computers are great for connecting with people who are not around us and we cannot talk to them on the daily basis at home. They are great for spreading news and getting massive amount of information at once. We also evolve and grow as the human race because of them. With every invention we move forward in the IT world. It is because we chose the IT world. We live in the IT world. But what if we crossed the line and let too much technology into our lives?

Computer is supposed to help people not replace them. Furthermore some people do not realise how much they are missing from their lives when computers are doing things for them and also some of them spend more time with the robot just by depending on them more than depending on the people. I believe that by using and depending so much on the computers, we as people lost some part of the human in ourselves.
